

Nelson Motors, Charlton Hayes, Bristol

20th April 1954

Your lordship,

The copy of the plans that were in your office safe have completely disappeared, I'm afraid. I doubt at this stage anyone will be able to steal a march from us on the Corsair itself, so it's probably not something we should worry about unduly from a commercial point of view, but Mr Rogers is very concerned about the theft itself. We are planning to hire two additional guards for the administration building.

Please accept my deepest apologies for the oversight.

Yours faithfully,

Martin Dawes
